

Fees of Accessing the CARES National Dataset FAQ

Overview

- As of January 2020, new research projects that receive funding from external sources will be charged a data fee for accessing the national dataset.
- The intent of this fee is not to inhibit access to the CARES national dataset. However, when external funds are awarded for a study, that CARES can recoup some of its costs in supporting the research process

What projects are charged a fee?

- There is no charge to access the CARES National Dataset if the research or study is funded from internal sources at the researcher's institution.
- CARES charges 5% of the total project award amount when the research or study is funded from sources external to the researcher's institution.
- Examples of external funding sources include but are not limited to:
 - The National Institutes of Health
 - Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality
 - American Heart Association
 - Industry

How do I notify CARES of my project receiving/not receiving funding?

- The CARES National Data Sharing application includes questions pertaining to the funding status of the study. Please complete the application as accurately as possible.
- If the funding status changes after the application is completed and submitted to CARES, please notify the CARES Epidemiologist, Rabab Al-Araji (rabab.al-araji@emory.edu) as soon as possible.

What happens if my project receives an extension?

- If your project receives an extension and is externally funded, a 5% fee will be charged to the additional award amount.

How do I make a payment to CARES?
